

Name: _____

Date: _____

Book Vs. Movie Compare and Contrast Rubric

	5	3	1
Ideas & Content	- Includes several significant points of comparison and/or contrast - Effectively supports each point with precise, well-chosen examples in the form of details, descriptions, facts or personal experience - All examples are from appropriate sources (literature, common sense, history, news items, etc.) - Any commentary that might be included is thoughtful and relevant to the examples provided ✧ Insightfully compares and/or contrasts the movie and the book.	- Included several expected points of comparison and/or contrast - Adequately supports each point with important examples mixed with less important ones - Examples are general and details are not as carefully chosen - Commentary lacks thought - Connections between examples and the main points are not as clearly presented. - Overall, the writer needs to think more deeply about the subjects ✧ Predictably compares and contrast the movie and the book.	- May mention or imply two or more subjects - May state one or more points of comparison and/or contrast - The supporting point(s), if included, are very incomplete and may not be accurate - The writer may: - Merely list points - Simply describe the subjects - Offer unrelated ideas - Retell personal experience with little connection to the subjects - Argue against the stated points ✧ Does not explain. The whole is extremely, unclear, incomplete, rambling, illogical, or disconnected.
Organization	- Covers all parts of the writing task - Focuses on the points of comparison and/or contrast throughout - Understands the purpose - Speaks clearly to the topic - Strong awareness of the audience Successfully includes: - a graceful introduction, clear thesis, fully supported body, and satisfying conclusion - a logical sequence of events - effective balance between examples and explanations (commentary) - a conclusion that reaches beyond a summary	- Covers most parts of the writing task - Mostly focuses on the topic - Mostly understands the purpose - Speaks to the topic - Shows some awareness of the audience Includes and beginning, middle, and end. However, sub sections may be out of balance: - May give too much detail to some parts and not enough to others - May need more detail overall - May let examples speak for themselves without connecting to the main point of comparison of contrast	- Covers only one part of the writing task - Shows no understanding of the purpose - May be off topic - Shows no awareness of the audience Shows no understanding of how to create an essay with a clear beginning, middle, and end. Ideas are not well-organized, or there is too little to organize
Style	Uses a variety of sentence types and effective transitions	Uses a variety of sentence types, but mostly commonplace language	Contains no sentence variety and uses very primary language
Conventions	- Contains few common errors - Errors do not confuse the reader	- Contains some errors - Errors do not confuse the reader	Contains serious errors which confuse the reader

Putting it All Together: First Draft

It's now time to write the first draft of your essay! Use your planning pages to complete both sides of this page. DO NOT simply copy what you wrote on those pages onto this page; reevaluate what you wrote on the planning pages and make appropriate changes, if necessary, on this first draft. This is a valuable opportunity to make minor changes to the essay that you already have mapped out.

Introductory Paragraph:

Paragraph 1

Hook: _____

Example: _____

Example: _____

Example: _____

Thesis: _____

The Body:

Paragraph 2

Difference 1: _____

Detail: _____

Detail: _____

Detail: _____

Closing: _____